Symposium on

Self-Disclosure in Organizations: Conceptualizations and Measurement

As a result of the strong interest and positive response at the last AOM meeting, we aim to continue and expand upon discussions on self-disclosure in the workplace. This symposium will explore the topic from multiple approaches, emphasizing conceptualizations, context, and measurement. We welcome research on self-disclosure across organizational levels and cultural contexts. Our aim with this symposium is to contribute to the advancement of conceptualization and measurement of self-disclosure across organizational domains, including interpersonal relationships, leadership, careers, and HRM.

If you are interested in participating, please contact us by November 8th with your proposal. Final long abstract submissions (5 pages) from participants will be due November 26th.
